ROBYN BEECHE: A PHOTOGRAPHER'S TRANSFORMATION

An Australian photographer at the height of London's high fashion world finds that fame and success are no longer enough.

Robyn Beeche became renowned in 80s London for her groundbreaking photographs of painted bodies, and collaborations with counter-culture personalities Zandra Rhodes, Vivienne Westwood, Leigh Bowery and Divine.

At the peak of her career, Beeche was "drawn like a magnet" to the Indian colourthrowing festival of Holi, and made the life-changing move to India. 25 years later, she remains deeply immersed in documenting her region's vibrant traditions as spiritual service, and her extensive archive is prized by international scholars.

A Life Exposed: Robyn Beeche weaves between Australia, London and India, dramatically depicting Beeche's extreme paradigm shift from highly constructed studio body-painted images, to documentation of a culture where body transformation occurs spontaneously as part of saturnalian religious rituals.
